the new hollywood era of the late 1960s and early 1970s has become one of the most romanticized periods in motion picture history celebrated for its stylistic boldness thematic complexity and the unshackling of directorial ambition the limits of auteurism aims to challenge many of these assumptions beginning with the commercial success of easy rider in 1969 and ending two years later with the critical and commercial failure of that film s twin progeny the last movie and the hired hand nicholas godfrey surveys a key moment that defined the subsequent aesthetic parameters of american commercial art cinema the book explores the role that contemporary critics played in determining how the movies of this period were understood and how in turn strategies of distribution influenced critical responses and dictated the conditions of entry into the rapidly codifying new hollywood canon focusing on a small number of industrially significant films this new history advances our understanding of this important moment of transition from classical to contemporary modes of production this book examines the recent trend for re performance and how this impacts on the relationship between live performance and death focusing specifically on examples of performance art the text analyses the relationship between performance re performance and death comparing the process of re performance to the process of mourning and arguing that both of these are processes of adaptation and survival using a variety of case studies including performances by ron athey julie tolentino martin o brien sheree rose jo spence and hannah wilke the book explores performances which can be considered acts of re performance as well as performances which examine some of the critical concerns of re performance including notions of illness loss and death by drawing upon both philosophical and performance studies discourses the text takes a novel approach to the relationship between re performance mourning and death
